Biography:

Dr. Khoury is an Associate Professor in the Department of Educational & Counselling Psychology (ECP), and he heads the McGill Mindfulness Research Lab where he and his team conduct research on advancing the theory, research, and applications of mindfulness and compassion. The global aim of the research is to make a deep lasting societal change by embracing new ways of interacting with oneself, other people, and the natural environment through the practices of mindfulness and compassion.

Prof. Khoury published numerous papers on mindfulness and compassion in leading journals in the domains of clinical psychology and physical/medical health. His work has gained international recognition, was cited more than 5,000 times and was selected by the University of Cambridge's Insights for Impact Report; a report published by the department of Psychology at the University of Cambridge citing the most impactful research papers in psychology worldwide. Furthermore, his work was ranked 67th worldwide on Web of Science in the category of clinical psychology. Dr. Khoury has also been recognized through multiple awards and scholarships, including the Association of Psychological Science Emerging Scholars Rising Stars Award, and the University's William Dawson Scholar Award.

Dr. Khoury conducted his doctoral research at Université de Montréal and his postdoctoral research at the University of Cambridge and McGill University. He is a clinical psychologist (Ordre des Psychologues du Québec) with a specialization in mindfulness-based treatments.
